replied the witness.

Dr. Bernael E. Murpay, an ambulance surgeon attached to St. Vincents
Hospital, testified that when he entered the office of Cela's warehouse the wounded man raised timeelf on his choose and uttered saveral inactions.

"You think, then that the wound was no self-influence ware denict," replied the curgeon.

Then Dominico Cella the kinsman of the dead man was called. As he took the stand his lawver, Mr. Levy, made a speech in which he explained that his client would speak now for the first time. He (Levy) had advised him to remain silent until the inquest.

The witness said that he had been din'ng late on the night his brother was slain. Passing the warehouse at 1 A. M., he noticed that the padlock was not on the door, also he saw a light ourring in the rear. Thinking that his nephew might be inside, he let himself in. He found his brother lying on the floor, covered with blood and groaning. "I asked him who did it" said Dominico Cella "and he pointed to himself. I telephoned for an amediance and called in Policeman Kruber."

Brother Springs a Surprise.

Brother Springs a Surprise. "Who put the overcoat and cushion under your brother?" asked the Assistant District-Attorney.
"I do not know," responded the witness.

Asked if Mr. Levy had instructed him not to talk to the District-Attornsy, he said that he had been advised to talk to no one, including the prosecutor. Then Cella produced a letter which was a surprise to the Coroner. no one, including the prosecutor, Then Cella produced a letter which was a surprise to the Coroner.

The witness declared the letter was in his brother's handwriting and he had found it in the safe after his brother's death. The letter was dated on Feb. 19, and read:

"Dear Brother Dominico: These two lires I leave are my last. I do not find any more earth in my head that can console me. Therefore, I recommend the pardon of my wife. I know that my wife does not consider innocence. and therefore I would not like that innocence would suffer for that which is not true, but what I should have done was to have the innocent to come, which I did not do. To my daughters I recommend my stepson Cesare Blanchi, with his four children, so that he will not be put in the middle of the street with his family by his mother."

The reading of this letter, which Cella did not attempt to explain, ended his testimony. He was followed by Blanchi, who was arrested and he d as a witness on the diy after its stepfather died.

He declared that the first he knew of the killing he read in the Sunday papers on Feb. 23. His stepfather had called at his shop on the day before.

"We never quarrelled," said Blanchi, 'but there was had blood between Mrs. Cella and my wife. Mrs. Cella supposed her husband and my wife were too friendly."

This was all for Blanchi and his wife. Mrs. Catherine Blanchi was called to corroborate his allbi. She said that Mrs. Cella had been insanely jealous of her.
